As November ends (where did it go so fast?!?) and December begins (how did it get here so quickly?!), we get to celebrate several family-oriented holiday seasons here at the end of the year. We are thankful for our many blessings here in the AMC.

Sadly we lost one of our executive board members unexpectedly in November: Barry Farnsworth, our Vice Education Chair. (See obituary later in the Breeze.) This just reminds us of how precarious and precious life is. Our thoughts and prayers are with Barry’s family.

I wish everyone a joyous holiday season. Please treasure your family and friends. Please party responsibly. Please be safe on the roads.

Happy Holidays to all. And, don’t forget to get outside!!! Our hardworking SEM volunteer leaders have set up some wonderful winter activities for you!

Barry C. Farnsworth, age 58, died unexpectedly Tuesday, November 19, in his home in West Bridgewater, MA. Barry was our Vice Chair of Education and a Red Line the Blue Hills hiker. Barry was born April 2, 1955, in Brockton, Massachusetts. He was a veteran of the Air Force, an engineer, an inventor, and an avid outdoorsman. Barry was a Commissioner with the Old Colony Council Boy Scouts of America. He was well-known for his booming voice, his intellectual personality, and his love of chess and science-fiction novels. Barry is survived by his wife and five children. We will all miss Barry, and sincerely thank him for his contributions to our chapter. See full obit [here].

An Appreciation

Barry Farnsworth, Vice Chair of SEM’s Education Committee, passed away suddenly November 19. After many years in leadership roles with the Scouts, Barry volunteered as Education Vice Chair to promote training levels of SEM trip leaders. Most recently he managed registration for our fall WFA offering and supported the weekend’s operation. He had hoped to contribute his experience with map & compass training in the Scouts to our chapter, and take over as Chair next year.

Thank you, Barry, for your commitment to SEM. We will miss you.

We were a group of 10 paddlers and 2 guides in 6 canoes on a 9 day trip paddling 100 miles down the headwaters of the St John river in northwestern Maine. This section of the river is considered to be the longest free flowing wild river east of the Mississippi. On the entire trip we encountered only 2 bridge crossings for logging trucks and a half dozen camps. Plans by the Corps of Engineers to build a major dam in the early 1960’s which would have flooded much of this wild and scenic river were later abandoned. Much of this section is now protected by the Nature Conservancy. Because it’s not fed by any major lakes it’s best run from May or early June before sections become too shallow for paddling.

Our put in and first night campsite was Baker Lake near the Quebec border. We arrived after hours of driving 100 miles on rough logging roads, sometimes having to detour due to spring washouts. Sightings of moose, deer and a black bear provided some interest on the long drive.

I was paddling with Dave a long time SE AMC canoe/kayak leader, we met the previous year on an Allagash River trip where he urged me to join the AMC. For many years Dave and his wife Barb led annual SEMA AMC Columbus weekend Saco River trips.

It was early May and the ice had only been out of the lake a couple of days. We spent the first day dodging rocks in the fast current on the Baker Branch until it joined the southwest Branch. Here the river widened to become the main St John where we passed 8 foot high ice flows stranded on the banks. Campsites on the river were ideal and a couple of cabins were available for use by paddlers. Our group used the cabin at Ledge Rapids on a raw, wet windy night to eat dinner and share a bottle of wine. Overnight the river had risen considerably so in the morning we were faced with large standing waves where the day before had been an easy run. We ran a ledge close to the left bank, plunging thru the waves taking on buckets of cold water. We immediately had to eddy out and bail our 18 ft Old Town Trippers.

Big Black rapids were next, normally a class 2 but now a raging class 3. We bushwhacked along the high right bank to scout the best line and were able to run it successfully. The beautiful campsite where the Big Black river joins the St John was occupied by a party of paddlers from Quebec the only other group we encountered on the river the entire trip. It had been a long 26 mile day but we paddled on to the next campsite. Heavy rain and snow in Quebec, the source of the Big Black branch was adding to the flow in the main St John, we watched huge trees that had been ripped from the banks upriver floating by our campsite.

It was here that we encountered the “wayward canoe”. We were relaxing after dinner watching a moose on the far bank when we noticed a half submerged canoe floating in the current. Jamie, one of our guides, and Dave grabbed PFD’s, jumped in a canoe and paddled the 200 yards across the river to try and retrieve the canoe. The rest of us at the campsite scanned the river for it’s occupants. Jamie and Dave chased the “wayward canoe” and were able to nudge it to the opposite bank where our Guide bailed it out and paddled it back to camp while Dave ferried the other canoe across the wide swift moving river. When we inspected the canoe it appeared to be undamaged with all camping gear still securely tied in. Now our concern was for it’s occupants. How far upriver did they capsize, had they survived the cold water or where they stranded on the river bank wet and hypothermic in the freezing night?

Our campsite was also occupied by 4 fisherman, it was the first campsite that could be reached with a 4 wheel drive on logging roads. It was getting dark and the nearest phone was over 40 miles away but they agreed to drive out and alert the Warden Service. They had driven only a few miles when they met a truck with a radio and the driver alerted authorities. The fishermen also hiked into the Big Black campsite to see if the Quebecois had seen anything. Overcoming a bit of language barrier they determined that they had seen the canoe in the river and hiked to the base of Big Black rapids searching for the paddlers but found nothing.

The next morning at first light a Maine game warden arrived at the campsite in his vehicle and shortly after a warden pilot flew over heading upriver. Within a few minutes the warden pilot radioed that he had spotted 2 canoes each with 3 occupants some miles upriver, we were pretty sure these were the paddlers of the “wayward canoe. We were much relieved with this news so we broke camp and continued our trip. Later we learned that the canoe after capsizing had floated many miles and thru one major rapid and several minor ones before we retrieved it, amazing that it had survived in such good condition. The paddlers were in the river for some time before their companions were able to rescue them. When they were reunited with their canoe they immediately arranged transportation back to their cars and left for home in New Hampshire, apparently the mishap having dampened their desire to continue the trip!

We continued to find the river unusually high. An afternoon snow storm on a rest day left a blanket of snow at another campsite and we broke ice in the wash basins most mornings. The river was full to the banks and fast when we reached Big Rapids, the last before the town of Dickey, our take out. Many of the rocks were now submerged, even one that a town local described as “big enough to park a pick up truck on”! We hugged the left bank and avoided any rocks still above water in this 3 mile long rapid. One canoe in our group did swamp but it was close to the river bank and the paddlers were able to bail it and continue, wet but OK. We learned later that the river at Big Rapids had measured over 61,000 cubic feet per second, the highest ever recorded for that date.

Our last night we camped at the base of Big Rapids and next morning after the “lumberjack breakfast” at a Fort Kent restaurant across from the New Brunswick border crossing we left for the 450 mile drive home. Perfect ending to the premier Maine canoe trip.

Chris and Bill Pellegrini - Family Hiking

This month we interview Chris and Bill Pellegrini, our Family Events Chair and Vice Chair. The Family Events Committee brings AMC families together by offering outdoor adventures suitable for adults and children of all ages. By participating in our events, families can learn about and enjoy regional natural resources, as well as meet other families who have the same interests.

What is your name?

Christine Pellegrini

How long have you been involved in hiking?

7 years

How long have you been an AMC member?

7 years

How long have you been a trip leader?

5 years

What do you enjoy about being a trip leader?

Watching a new hiker summit their first 4000 foot mountain or taking someone hiking for the first time.

What advice would you give to someone who is thinking of becoming a trip leader?

Just have fun planning interesting hikes for yourself and then everyone else will have a great time.

What/where are some of your hikes?

Locally in SE MA, Western MA, White Mountains, NH, Maine.

Where would you like to hike that you have not been yet (your dream trip)?

Probably the Grand Canyon or in some of the National Parks out West.

What advice would you give someone who is just getting into hiking?

Take your time to work yourself up to big mountains and buy the best gear you can afford first so you don’t have to keep upgrading your gear.

Now that you are leading family hikes, what other factors must you consider when hiking with children?

Oddly enough the same things you consider with adults: pace, time, distance and terrain. Kids can’t do the distances or elevation gain of an adult. I think they can probably scramble as well if not better than some adults. We have children as young as 2 1/2 hiking and they have a hard time keeping up unless we slow the pace down considerably. Having said that children on our hikes have frequently surprise us with their abilities. Five miles is the longest hike we have done so far. Another consideration is we have to keep them interested. You want to make sure there are things to do on the hike besides just walk. If there are things to look at like fire towers or waterfalls and maybe some rocks to scramble they won’t be so worried about the time or distance. We have theme hikes during the holiday seasons and choose seasonal hikes like spring when the wildflowers are in bloom or fall when the leaves are turning.

What else would you like us to know about hiking?

Family Hiking: It’s a wonderful thing to do for family time and it can be done any time of year. When we started hiking it was with our son Taylor when he was a teenager. When our grandchildren came along we started them hiking at very young ages. It’s about having fun and getting the family outside for exercise and fresh air. Developing a child’s interest and love for nature is so important for their future and the future of the earth. Best of all once you have made some initial purchases it’s basically free. We got into leading hikes with families because we were essentially already doing it on our own and as AMC hike leaders it just made sense. Hiking in general: It is wonderful exercise and there is nothing better than summiting a mountain, taking in the views from the top, and marveling at your accomplishment at the end. That pretty much sums it up for us.
Backpacking with children

by Ray Anderson

Young kids need to stay active. They also thrive in new and challenging situations. Why not take them on an overnight camping trip in the mountains?

A few years ago, I took my step-grandson, Anthony, and his friend on a hike in the White Mountains of New Hampshire. I pulled out two old backpacks and drove us up to the Mount Liberty trailhead. They asked me on the ride up if we would see snakes and bears; I told them to stay alert and be watchful.

Late morning, we started the climb up to the Mount Liberty tent site, which is about three-quarters of the way to the summit. At the site, I showed them how to get water and treat it. I handed them their private tent set-up instructions and told them to figure it out. It was a nice afternoon with plenty of time before sunset; they put their heads together and did fine.

I wanted to teach them about the wilds and quickly realized they would put up with some instruction, but not lots. So I took it easy on them. The next morning on the summit, they were wide-eyed as they huddled looking at views. The boys felt like they had accomplished something.

On the way back down, I let each of them navigate and quizzed them about what they would do if they got lost. At trail junctions, I asked them to pull out their maps and show me where they were. I had my watch and showed them how long it took to hike a certain segment—another way to confirm what you are doing, I’d said.

These pictures tell the story. We didn’t see any snakes or bears, but I taught them what camping basics I could in the time we had. They’ve turned into fine young men.

Erika Bloom Awarded - 2013 Distinguished Service Award (DSA)

By Max Sarazin

Erika Bloom awarded our chapter's highest award, the Distinguished Service Award (DSA). The DSA has been given out since 2000 and is given to someone who has “distinguished service” — above and beyond the usual SEM high level of volunteer service. The recipient this year was Erika Bloom -- the creator and manager of this Short Notice Email List!

As a Hike Committee Leader, Erika progressed from participant to Co-Leader to Hike Leader to Winter Hike leader. In addition to other trips, for years she led weekly Conditioning Hikes at the Blue Hills. Erika also served as Hiking Vice Chair, then Hiking Chair for 3 years. In 2002, Erika investigated the options and set up this Short Notice Email List, sometimes abbreviated as SNEL. For the past 11 years, she has continued to run the SNEL system.

Please congratulate Erika when you see her on the trails (or when you see her on the top of Mt. Kilimanjaro)!

Bill Cannon & Ellen Thompson  - finishing Redline Trails

By Bill Cannon

A friend of mine that I met through the Boy Scout Troop we belong to, told me about Red Lining and thought I would like it. He was wrong. I love Red Lining.

I started on May 26th, 2011. It was the CC Camp hike. We came out of the woods in darkness and had trouble finding the trail back to the road. On our way back to the cars, people were stopping and asking where the party was. It was a great hike. Great leaders, and great hikers. I was hooked that night.

I wasn’t as interested in Red Lining my map as I was in the actual hikes. After some time I went back and started filling it in. Over the next 2 years I have made some great friends, heard some great stories, learned a lot about hiking and found a wonderful outdoor resource. I think the best part was filling in the Orphan trails.

Ellen was a huge inspiration to me finishing. We encouraged each other as we completed a lot of common trails together. Then I did my personal orphans. I hikes 5 days a week for the last 2 weeks. I couldn’t wait to get to the trails. During that time I felt a bonding, for lack of a better description, with the Blue Hills. I paid attention more being by myself. I saw deer every time out. I watched the trails and markers and followed along my map a lot more.

The fall foliage and temperatures were not to hard to take either. Now it’s time to Blue Line. This time rather than dread those orphans and trails I missed, I will be looking forward to doing them. One on one with the Blue Hills.

By Ellen Thompson

What can I say about red lining of the blue hills? This experience was far more rewarding and exciting than I ever could have dreamed. At 6:00 once a week, tired from working all day, I have had the privilege of hiking around the woods with a fabulous group of people. It did not matter if the weather was incredibly hot, freezing cold, pouring rain, (except for Thunderstorms) we hiked, and I always had a ball. Kudos to Bill Cannon for taking the extra hikes with me so I was able to finish this October.

Special thanks to Joe Keogh, Michael Schwarz, Maureen Kelly, Jim Casey for leading these hikes.

Skyline End-to-End Hike Provides Fitting Finale to RLBH Season

By Paul Miller
SEM Hiking Chair

The SEM Redline the Blue Hills (RLHB) Series that SEM hike leader, Bob Vogel, started a number of years ago just seems to keep getting more and more popular every year. Under the current leadership of Joe Keogh, Maureen Kelly, Michael Swartz and others, it’s not unusual for 20-30 hikers to show up at 5:45 pm for the regular Thursday afternoon RLBH hikes, held every Thursday in the spring, summer, and fall. Not only has this provided a great vehicle for getting SEM members out on the trails on a regular basis for these often wacky, but always sociable, weekly hikes, it’s also turned into a virtual “factory” for producing a slew of new and very capable SEM hike leaders!

While I didn’t get a chance to participate in any of this year’s Thursday evening RLBH hikes, I was lucky enough to join the group for the now-traditional RLBH season finale; a relatively challenging 8.7-mile long Skyline Trail End-to-End hike in the Blue Hills.

For this year’s Skyline “End-to-Ender” on Saturday, Nov. 16th, 28 hikers showed up at the Shea Rink in Quincy. We laced on our hiking boots, signed in, socialized a bit, and then car-pooled to the end of Royal St. in Canton to begin the actual hike. While the day had begun overcast, the skies now began to clear and with the thermometer rising quickly towards the low 60s; it became obvious to everyone that we had lucked out with some superb hiking weather! After entering the woods, we caught up with the Skyline Trail and intentionally went in the wrong direction for a short stretch to reach the start of the trail at the Rte. 95/128 (or is it now Rte. 93?) cloverleaf. Then, we did an “about face” and headed back eastward on the Skyline toward Little Big Blue Hill. While this is relatively gentle terrain by “Skyline” standards, we had to be careful not to slip on the thick bed of leaves covering the sloping trail. (I may have been the first of several hikers to go down, but luckily for me, it was a “soft” landing.)

HOLIDAY PUZZLE ANSWERS

After hustling across busy Rte. 138 near the Trailside Museum and Blue Hills Ski Area, the group started a real climb up to the top of Big Blue on a steep, rugged section of the Skyline Trail. Looking back, we caught our first views of the day. After passing the Blue Hill Observatory, we arrived at the 614-foot summit of Big Blue, where we stopped to regroup and to provide hikers who’d never been to the top of the Eliot Tower to enjoy the expansive views from that vantage point.

From the summit, we took the Skyline North loop back down and then up again over Wolcott, Hemingway, and Hancock Hills, which leads steeply down to the Reservation Headquarters on Hillside St., where we stopped to take advantage of the sole, but oh-so-convenient restroom. Here, I was pleased to bump into fellow-SEMerS, Christina and Tom, who were hiking on their own that day, preparing for the upcoming SEM Winter Hiking Series!

Rocks in the BH, courtesy Ken Carson

The Reserve Headquarter, we crossed Hillside Street and continued on the Skyline up over Tucker and Boyce Hills, carefully negotiating down one of the steeper and trickier spots on the trail and then climbed up to the top of Buck Hill, where we stopped for lunch, to enjoy the views, and munch on the homemade “summit treats” that Maureen and Cathy had graciously prepared for the group (and lugged up in their daypacks!).

After lunch, we continued on over Buck Hill and descended steeply to Rte. 138 taking advantage of the stone steps that the CCC trail crews had built back in the 30s (along with most of the other trails and structures in the Blue Hills). Somehow, we got the heavy traffic on Rte. 138 to stop long enough to get everyone across and then continued hiking through some very pretty wooded sections, eventually reaching the top of Chickatawbut Hill and then on over Nahanton Hill, which skirts the now partially enclosed Blue Hill Reservoir. When we got to Wampatuck Road, we noticed a lot of fire trucks, and a ranger informed us that, due to fire containment activities on Wampatuck Hill, we had to skirt around that short section of the Skyline Trail on the Pipeline Trail. After reconnecting with the Skyline, we climbed and/or scrambled up a steep section toward the top of Rattlesnake Hill, avoiding the section of the trail that leads a short way up to the actual summit, which the DCR recently closed in its efforts to help protect the rattlesnakes that hang out there. From Rattlesnake Hill, it’s “downhill all the way,” with the Skyline Trail taking us past the two St. Moritz ponds and back to the parking area at the Shea Rink, where many of us had left our cars.

After circling up one last time and thanking the leaders for a great hike, we organized rides back to Royal St. for those that had driven the rest of us over there in the morning and then many hikers headed over to the nearby Blue Hills Brewery for some post-hike socializing.

Me? I headed home for a nice hot shower to help soothe my tired muscles following this very enjoyable, 6.5-hour, 8.7-mile long hike that (according to Joe Keogh’s trusty GPS) involved 2,400 feet of elevation gain. Not too shabby for a “local” hike in the Blue Hills!

What is Wilderness First Aid all About?

In simple terms, dealing with medical emergencies when 911 can’t help you. That’s what trip leaders taking groups into remote areas may have to deal with. And not just trip leaders can benefit. Those of you taking family on camping trips into more isolated areas, or individuals who may be trekking in the back country either solo or with a few friends. WFA training will help you deal with medical situations should they ever occur, and we all hope they don’t.

SEM sponsors WFA training twice a year. The most recent class held in Foxboro Nov. 9 & 10 covered the basics of assessing a situation and deciding what to do. What types of situations? Accidents like sprains and fractures (fairly common), environmentally induced hypothermia, frostbite and dehydration (it happens), and standard soft tissue injuries such as cuts, bruises and lacerations (when a Band-Aid will not suffice). Along the way it also covered other topics including loss of consciousness (now what do you do?).

The class structure involves both lecture and demonstration followed by a series of role plays. A lecture (no view graphs thank goodness) and supporting demonstration typically preceded a role play. We learned how to splint broken bones, protect a victim from the elements, and take safe action in lightning storms. The accompanying pictures illustrate one of the several role plays, soft tissue injuries. A group of hikers comes across an accident scene with several injured hikers. The group spreads out and seeks to treat each injury, all different, two or three rescuers per victim. Each rescuer gets to practice training skills which, in the illustrated case, were severe lacerations and a compound fracture. What would you do in such a circumstance? At close of role play it’s debrief time to review what was done right and what could be done differently.

Eighteen attended this class, 11 from SEM, the remainder from other chapters and a few non-members. Our next offering will be the weekend of April 5 & 6, 2014. If you would like to be part of the next class, contact either your Education Chair or Vice Chair.

Seven paddlers left an empty put-in on Follins Pond Road in Dennis paddling counter-clockwise around Follins Pond hugging the shore and exerting very little effort as the water was unbelievably calm and clear. A light drizzle started and continued on and off until after lunch. We went into a very colorful cove and then headed to Weir Creek. There was sufficient water to paddle under the North Dennis Bridge and we all flew under it into Mill Pond which was very scenic with swans, mallard ducks and one attractive duck Margot said was a blue Swedish/pekin mix. After circling Mill Pond we headed back to the bridge where the water was still rapidly flowing in and there was plenty of it so no danger of hitting a rock. Four paddlers managed to get under the bridge by using the ceiling to pull themselves thru. Three paddlers opted to portage over the bridge. Since they were out of their boats and it was close to noon we decided to have lunch on the Follins Pond side under some trees which nicely blocked the drizzle. Margot had brought a small pumpkin for our luncheon centerpiece. Afterwards we headed around Swamp Cove, onto Viking Rock; then into Dinah’s Pond and Kelleys Bay reaching the put-in at 2:15. We probably paddled 6-7 miles depending on closely one hugged the shore. All agreed it was a good way to spend a drizzly day.

Annual Pizza Social

November 1st brought the first New Hampshire Chapter Annual Pizza Social at Lonesome Lake Hut. New Hampshire leaders led a group of about 24 people to the hut—some first-time visitors to one of the AMC huts, others veteran hikers of the White Mountains. They prepared homemade pizza for the event to enhance the enjoyment of the self-service that is available at the Huts this time of year. Also planned for the evening was a creative scavenger hunt and a hut trivia game to keep things exciting after the pizza dinner.

Next year’s Annual Pizza Social will fall on Friday October 31st, providing the perfect opportunity for a Costume Party/Pizza Social combination event. To participate in the 2014 event, perspective participants should contact Denise Spoor at 603-466-8137 or by email at dspoor@outdoors.org. This information will be posted on the AMC website and in the AMC Outdoors magazine as well.
