THE CHANGING CAPE COD SHORELINE

Presentation By Gil Newton

The shoreline of Cape Cod is rich in the diversity of marine plants and animals. Many of these species have washed up on the numerous sandy beaches, but several live embedded in the hostile intertidal zone, or attached to the many rocks and jetties in front of the beaches. This fascinating world of marine life can be seen by exploring the various marine habitats including the salt marshes, the mud flats, and the sand dunes. How are these organisms adapting to climate change? What species are being most affected by increasing water temperature and ocean acidification? And what can we expect as sea levels rise and coastal erosion increases? We will examine these topics and other related issues in this presentation and consider the implications of climate change in the coastal zone.
